PRAY FOR THE BLAST / image by Amalie Flynn

Checkpoint

The car came from nowhere, it came from everywhere –

white blur and tire squall, a four-door payload
of heat and pressure and steel.

When it is over, there is just the tinkle of falling brass and a man slumped
in a pool of broken glass and coolant on hot asphalt, calm as a corpse.

Doc cuts his shirt.
His face is weathered by years of this. Layers of skin and yellow fat pucker from his open side.

He breathes.

In the trunk of the rusted-out sedan, where the bomb
should be,

there are only two tanks,
an oxygen mask, and a box filled with apricots and dates.

There are Four Ways to Die in an Explosion

First the blast rips limbs from the torso. Throws tender bodies against concrete walls. Pulverizes bones against pavement. Those closest to the bomb are never found whole.

Then the fragmentation.
Little pieces of metal debris, like the one that punched an acorn-sized hole through the back of Sergeant Gardner's skull.

Heat from the explosion starts fires.
Vehicles Burn. Ammunition
burns. People burn, alive. When a driver is trapped inside white-hot steel, prayers must be said silently for the smoke to take him first.

Pressure collapses lungs and bowels. The bleeding happens on the inside.
It can be hours before the skin turns pale and the bulk of a person drops.

None of the anatomy is safe, so when the time comes, pray for the blast or fragmentation. Pray for the heat that vaporizes.

Pray for the kind of pressure that makes the world dark and silent before the bitter taste of iron and cold panic.

Good Friday, Udairi Range Complex, Kuwait

The first time I saw the sun rise over the desert
it was 4 a.m.

Across miles of sand and rusted hulks, the throbbing of heavy guns echoed.

Over the horizon,
where the beginning and the end meet and disappear, Friday arrived.

We saw the jeering crowds, the scourge and spear-tip, the crown of thorns and the crucifix, waiting.

What could we have known about atonement?
What did we know, then, of judging the quick against the dead?
