New Poetry by Saramanda Swigart: "Reckoning" and "The Small I"

BY THE ROOTS / image by Amalie Flynn RECKONING

don't worry about me i am not well but you've worried enough my prosperity has a body

count-

this shielded flesh conspicuous & allowed to be balks at being back-

groundthis mouth taught (without being taught) it is clearest & loudest & purest squirms when it must shut up & become earsi do not know how to be ears i know how to open my mouth monstrously wide to spew & eat wordswords are my birthright & we the authors bulldoze other stories to rubble so the Other trips over each foregone conclusioni am trained to make murder invisible but understories cling, bloody mine with the dragged, sullied bodiesof those disappeared beneath my own soft landing we need other & better storiesspeak please, whatever you have to saypull out this blighted story by the roots & plant a new one, green, tender, & worth loving-

THE SMALL I

this is my country look i overturn the junk drawer of my white/middle-class life and take stock rifling i find i am not a capital letter anymore first person singular has shrunk wizened down to that apple core i found beneath the car seat last month or that ivy there, brown and dead because i killed it the waxy leaf tree outside the front door (the city said we were its stewards in a single-page note in our mailbox) my heart brimming then with the largesse of new motherhood i thought i could take on the health of every tree in California but over the course of six years the ivy became a cloak around its trunk then an embrace then a stranglehold until tree leaves thinned i spent a long time tearing up the roots of that ivy now it brownssaved the tree but ivy clings a flammable bolus around its midsection and the small i how to locate i when i am both tree and ivy?