New Poetry from Chad Corrigan: "Hidden Mountain Tops"

SMOKE CLOUDS / image by Amalie Flynn
The top of the mountain is hidden.
It looks like a cloud of smoke.
But it's a snow filled cloud.
The map says it's thirty-seven hundred and sixty-nine feet.
The clouds must be about thirty-four hundred.
From their helicopter cockpits
they still look up dwarfed by the mountain and ceiling.
Small against the storm.