

New Fiction by Sara Doty: Vermillion

As I acclimated to the heat, I noticed my skin's weight for the first time. My subcutaneous fat layer pressed against the epidermis, the tissue, and the muscle, pushing them apart.