Gwen Stefani Knows How to Get Everything I Want

It takes a misdelivered Cosmo to finally understand what I want and how to get it. Gwen Stefani tells the truth on page 89.
We believe in Gwen because her apron of chainlink stars sparkles over a black bustier; star-spangled bondage, says an editor.
She slouches, holds the heel of her right white Louboutin in one hand as if to say Congress respects my body, as if to say rifles aren't worth shooting.
This is what I want and Gwen is here to deliver. When she slips into a red sport coat and jeans she comes in loud and clear: grant proposals that write themselves, cartons of baby formula sold from unlocked shelves at CVS, eight days of rain over California.
Because Gwen knows how to get everything I want, she can afford to be an optimist. Pharrell is rad, her mom is rad, the whole world is rad. I agree, Gwen, I do!
And I'd be giddy too in that baby blue jacket, its faux-bullet spikes screaming peace talks and pacifism, bubblegum fingernails that tell me soldiers who drop my writing class are only on vacation. She pulls her Union Jack sunglasses down with one finger. This means Ruth Stone never died but went into hiding, it means the grocery store lobsters have escaped, it means I can refinance.

Gwen steps into a pair of fishnets as if to say the 2nd Infantry Division won't return to Iraq, as if to say minke whales are singing on the Japanese coast.

Notification

This is how I imagine it.

A black Durango follows me to work, then home, tracks me to King Soopers where I buy peppermint tea and milk.

It idles in the parking lot, the driver obscured by clouds of bitter exhaust. I know it is a man by his shoulders, his grinding jaw.

I know he has drawn the short stick.

He tracks me home and waits until the faint clicking of our luck slows and stops. He steps outside on a current of aftershave and starched polyester, pulls another man in uniform from the backseat: he will stay to help me make arrangements.

They use the handrail on the wooden porch.

They expect to be wounded.

Happy Birthday, Army

I'm wearing lace this time, gold trim over a black slip because Happy Birthday, Army.
I offer you these blisters in my black leather stilettos with mock-lace cut-outs.
Tom says it's a short ceremony, we'll be done by nine but he tells the sitter eleven and I wedge a book into my purse.
In seeing nothing I've read too much: the empty-bellied howitzer kicked up in the corner of the ballroom points me toward the cash bar, casts a shadow over the cream in my Kahlua and turns the milk grey.
I drink it. I order a second before the emcee tells the men to seat their ladies.

Uniforms droop by the exits on velvet hangers, gas masks sag on wooden dowels.
Quick, boys! Post the colors!
The lights drop and the general mounts the stage in a shimmer of green and yellow spotlights, tells us to enjoy ourselves for once—but first these messages: thank you to our guest speaker, the anchor from ESPN, thank you to our sponsors, thank you to the sergeant major here to recite "Old Glory" in the center of the room:

I am arrogant.

I am proud.

I bow to no one.

I am worshipped.

We are dumbstruck, his recitation flung toward us like an axe through paper.

Tom finds him later and pays for his beer.

Johann Wilhelm Preyer, "Still Life with Champagne Flute," 1859, Walters Art Museum, Baltimore, MD.

The chandeliers are champagne, crystal brims sloshing with bubbles.
Someone's wife wins a kayak and just when I think a lieutenant nearby will surely jump from his table to shake a bag of limbs from his eye sockets, a truckload of body parts grey with longing for the soul, a woman's voice whispers from beneath the howitzer, the rented microphone on fire with song:

happy birrrrthday, dear arrrrmy a la Marilyn Monroe, and we are all a bunch of JFKs in our lace and heels and cummerbunds and cords, watching a five-tiered cake piped in black and gold buttercream being pulled between our tables by a silver robot and shrug into the silk of knowing we could end all this with the flick of a finger if we wanted.

Majors' Mafia

They want us to call ourselves the Majors' Mafia and by They I mean We because the Majors are our husbands and they say very little about what is discussed during cocktail hour at the Commander's house as if our words sound friendly but are muffled by a closed door and the Wives giggle as if to say we are not exactly thugs as if to say they would never!

and a knot of words loosens at the bottom of my throat like a paper lantern released as if to say get out, as if to say I am on fire, and I have a problem with the gang metaphor but also the possessive Majors'— that bitch of an apostrophe at the end of my husband's rank like I am, we are, owned the way farmers own turkeys and we are just as articulate, just as grand, just as preoccupied, because farmers are in the business of keeping turkeys alive until they aren't, farmers don't keep turkeys warm because turkeys have rights and these women can't possibly be standing in a half circle around a stack of spangled cupcakes generating ideas like these, like names, like possessives, like we aren't making ourselves more palatable by forming a flock and nibbling sweet things, and the sugar stars in the frosting remind me how one can trick a headstrong bird into eating by leaving shiny marbles in its dish, like the bird will think marbles!
I love marbles! then forget to fast,
and these women can't possibly be women, they must be birds, they sound like a lullaby when they say we need a group name because we need a Facebook page in order to express solidarity and they say solidarity is a survival skill for all Army Wives, and the paper lanterns are rising again up my neck toward the brain stem and my spine is burning and I'm thinking about the tomahawks and sabers and rifles and hunting knives on the walls here in this lovely home and I'm thinking survival is a bread that I can't eat here, and I ask them to excuse me for a moment so I can check my face in the bathroom mirror where I find a sugar star wedged in my teeth and I'm thinking I could use an ax to fix that.

When Tom Asks Me to Call the Incoming Major's Wife and Welcome Her to the Battalion

Hi is this Becky                      this is Abby Murray                      my husband (different last name) is the S-3 in the battalion where your husband is being sent                      I don't know what S stands for or why 3                      anyway Tom's leaving this position and your husband will replace him soon you sound nice                      anyway                      welcome                      do you know if there's something I'm supposed to say or help you with                      Tom just said welcome her and I guess I have I don't know                      what does it mean to feel welcome as a woman I really can't say every week I feel more at home in a compact mirror                      I think I was asked to call you because we are both women                      my dog doesn't even speak when I tell her to but she does bark a lot she likes to speak on her terms anyway                      the battalion mascot is a buffalo so people are really into buffalos here                      buffalo hats sweaters earrings umbrellas leggings there's a big dead buffalo in the entryway to battalion headquarters                      it was donated by a museum in Alaska                      the taxidermist even glazed his nose to make it appear wet                      like he was snuffling the prairie just seconds before a glass case sprang up around him and BAM he had a few minutes to breathe his last bits of air while the herd backed away                      my daughter loves the buffalo but is concerned about his lack of oxygen                      he's not the only symbol of death in that hallway there are rifles and sabers as well                      I'm sorry I hope you like it here                      the winters are mild and there's cedar everywhere                      it smells good on the coast                      Tom says you're from Texas                      that's nice                      I was in Texas once                      it was Texasy I should warn you your husband might ask you to do strange things for reasons he can't articulate                      like calling women because you are a woman and we should all be welcomed to the jobs we don't have                      if there's anything you need try Google or maybe call someone who knows your voice                      I'm sure you'll be great you sound happy
