

New Nonfiction by J. Malcolm Garcia: The Quiet Season

David E. sits at a picnic table across from me at a restaurant/hostel outside of Da Nang. The owner, Hoa Nguyen, a slim, sixty-one-year-old Vietnamese, slouches beside me, his elbows on the table, eyes darting to the street.